METHODIST HOME OBSERVES OCTOBER AS HARVEST MONTH

Bishop Paul Neff Garber, resident bishop of the Richmond area, Methodist Church, and the fifteen District Superintendents of the Virginia Conference are taking the lead in the annual offerings for Hermitage, the denomination's home for aging men and women. By order of the Annual Conference, October is designated as "Hermitage Month" with offerings to be taken in each of the 1,200 churches of the Conference with a goal of $175,000 was ordered by the Conference in its session in June. Each of the 600 pastors is charged with the responsibility of giving information about the Home and having the offering taken in his church, since Hermitage is considered a major interest of the Conference.

Eighty-one men and women are now "members of the Home family" according to Dr. Bernard S. Via, Administrator of the Home, which is located in Richmond. The Methodist Church has seventy such Homes in the United States. The Home here in Virginia is recognized as one of the best and will soon be among the largest of such institutions.

Although it has been in operation for only six years, Hermitage has grown steadily both in buildings and in the size of its family. In order to meet the increasing demand for such care two dormitories are now under construction adding 147 bedrooms to the facilities of the Home. These are expected to be completed by late spring of 1956. The total capacity will then be about 250.

Emphasis is being placed on Sunday, October 23, as the time for the special offerings through the entire month.

Flowers, from Kemper Street Baptist Church of Lynchburg, will be bringing the evangelistic messages.

NEW BOOK PUBLISHED ON VA. GOVERNMENT

Richmond, Va.- Scheduled for publication on Friday is a comprehensive book on "Virginia's Government," compiled by the Research Department of the Virginia State Chamber of Commerce in cooperation with many state agencies and officials.

"This represents a conscientious effort by the State Chamber of Commerce to meet a need in our Commonwealth," said Frank A. Ernst, of Peterburg, president of the State Chamber. "We feel that this is the most comprehensive and easily understood document of its kind to be given Virginians in well over two decades."

The 150-page book provides a discription of the structure and function of the state, county, and municipal governmental entities in Virginia. Ernst pointed out that it probably would become a 'reliable source of material not only for every teacher and school child, but also for all business and industrial people who are interested in efficient government."

Compiled under the direction of the State Affairs Committee of the State Chamber, which is headed by David Harrison, of Hopewell, the book offers many charts, illustrations, and graphs to simplify the story of how Virginians govern themselves.

One of the features of the book is the 21-step illustration of how a bill becomes a law. A fictitious member of the General Assembly, is shown in cartoon drafting his bill, and then marshalling it through its processes until it is ready for the signature of the Governor.

The text matter of the book covers the Virginia voting laws, its system of taxation and financial set-up, education and judicial systems, game and inland fisheries, and literally an explanation of the purpose and the working functions of all departments, divisions, and commissions of Virginia's governmental system.

Oil has been found in Israel. The discovery was at Heletz, six miles nortsast of Gaza. Drillers struck oil at a depth of 4,906 feet.

Health and Beauty

The condition of your hair is but a reflection of your general health. You have often been neglected, undernourished animals. All of them had dull, scraggy, unkept, dead-looking hair. The same can be said of human beings.

The hair responds readily not only to the local care which you bestow upon it, but to the food you eat, the amount of sleep you get, bathing, exercising, and so forth. If you meet a child or an adult with clear skin, rosy cheeks, sparkling eyes, and shining well-kept hair, it bespeaks health and well-being.

The hair is nourished from the blood stream, and the blood is made from what you eat. For this reason you must eat foods that are rich in vitamins, minerals, fats, proteins, sugars, and starches. The glands are influenced by diet. They in turn have much to do with the hair.

Irish moss is used in making desserts in this country, but in Ireland the people eat quantities of these sea porducts, which are known as sea greens, and are rich in iodine. It is supposed to account for the thick black hair that is so common on the Emerald Isle.

Animals that are properly fed, and whose owners see that their coats are well brushed daily look sleek. Their hair has a satiny sheen never seen in uncared for animals.

If milady wants shining locks, she should keep her hair clean and her scalp exercised by frequent brushings. This brings the blood to every tiny follicle and feeds the hair. After a vigorous brushing, the scalp glows with warmth, and has a feeling of well-being which is induced by improved circulation.

Massage helps to invigorate the scalp. It is a good practice to catch it up in little bunches and pull it energetically. This loosens and exercises the scalp.

It is said that women do not become bald as do men because the scalp is fed by blood which is brought there by brushing, massage, pulling the hair, etc. Men's hair is kept so short that it does not receive proper exercise. The hair follicles cease to provide nourishment on account of an insufficient supply of blood to the parts. In consequence, the hair falls out and the follicles die. After this happens, nothing can make the hair grow back again.

Air and sunshine are good for the scalp. Hair should be massaged every day and shampooed on an average of every two weeks.

NEW PLAN FOR MODERN INDUSTRIAL COMMUNITIES

Richmond, Va.- Wide-awake communities are turning to "planned industrial districts" to increase their chances of attracting new industries.

A planned industrial district, states the leading article in the October issue of the Virginia Economic Review, is well located land set aside for industry, protected from encroachment and serviced with utilities and transportation facilities.

The district can be best developed through combined planning by the local industrial development corporation and the local planning commission.

Everything is planned for in advance—space for factories, expansion, parking, utilities, streets, loading areas, transportation, fuels, — everything the industrialist needs or wants.

Already Norfolk is embarking on its third industrial district, the article points out. Norfolk has developed blighted areas within the city for industrialists who prefer such in-city locations.

While granting that a "packaged site" is the best answer to most industrial prospect needs, the article emphasizes that some communities may not be able to do this. One solution here is for local development corporations to other agencies to sell the property it acquires to one or more industries and use the funds derived from the sale for installation of facilities. Farmville is following this course is an effort to attract industries.

Such districts are feasible not only in cities and towns, but also in counties, the article asserts.

A United States Chamber of Commerce publication, "Organized Industrial Districts," listing districts formed prior to 1954, points out that up to that time, 38 per cent of such industrial districts in the United States were owned by railroads, 25 per cent by real estate brokers and building contractors, with a smaller percentage by municipal government and other agencies such as local industrial development corporations. Some state governments are also getting into the business. New Hampshire has created a state authority to finance development of so-called "industrial parks" to attract new industry.

SEE THE WORLD ON $3

New York.- Three young Swiss, who set out two years ago to see the world with capital of $3, three bicycles and abundant good health and good humor, have arrived here from the general direction of Mexico. The three — Heli Triolliet, 28; Robert Bavaud, 26; and Roger Cherpillod, 24, left Lausanne on Aug. 10, 1952 and have traveled through France, Spain North Africa and a sizeable part of South America. They paid their way by yodeling and playing the piano and accordion for their meals, dancing, putting on skits, swabbing decks or cleaning floors as the occasion required. They expect to tour Canada before returning home.

BIG GAME TROPHY CONTEST FOR 1955

The State Big Game Trophy Contest for 1955, sponsored by the Commission of Game and Inland Fisheries and the Virginia Sportsman's Association, will end on Saturday, November 19th, at Apprentice Building Gymnasium, Newport News Shipyard, Washington Ave., Newport News.

To be eligible for entry in the State Contest, trophies must have been entered in the local or regional contest and ranked among the top five within that area. There are two regional contests each year, one for trophies killed west of the Blue Ridge Mountains and one for trophies killed west of the Ridge.

The Peninsula Sportsmen's Association will again sponsor the regional contest, which will be held Dec. 4, in conjunction with the Hampton Roads Rod and Gun Show. Details may be obtained from Thomas D. Eskman, Chairman, Big Game Trophy Contest, Virginia Sportsman's Association, 1300 Chesapeake Ave, Hampton, Va.

Only bear and deer killed in Virginia during the 1954-55 hunting season will be eligible for entry in the regional contest and annual state competition only in the particular contest where it was killed. Trophies would be desirable for the state contest trophy to be accompanied by a map in order to make the judging of trophies more accurate.

The Air Force plans to spend $6 - $7 billion on planes.

No change in interest rates is expected for the rest of the year.

THE AMERICAN LEGION STANDS FOR SECURITY

Many veterans of World War I returned home filled with patriotism and a sincere desire to continue to serve their country while pursuing civilian ambitions. They were battle weary and determined that other young men would not face the hell of war without proper training and that we, as a nation, would never again be caught unprepared.

With the American Expedition-ary Force and the trenches of France as a common bond, many of the returning veterans found The American Legion as the outlet for continued service to the security of their country. They were joined later by veterans of World War II and the Korean War.

The catastrophe of World War I taught the founders and members of The American Legion that war's cost in blood and money is proportionate to the nation's degree of preparedness. To make our nation, its ideals, and its people secure from attack by provision for an adequate defense has ever been a principal objective of The American Legion.

The American Legion can point with pride to its record and recommendations in matters of national security — from its advocacy of the National Defense Act of 1920 to the establishment of the Air Force Academy in 1954. In the interim years, sound policies of national security emanated from National Conventions of The American Legion, many were later adopted as government policy, others by-passed at great risk to our security.

Top military and civilian leaders of the United States willingly meet and discuss with Legionnaires, many times in closed door sessions, matters of utmost importance to our national defense planning. Before establishing a position on matters of national security, all facts are carefully studied, considered and discussed.

The American Legion is a fighting organization when it involves matters which are important to our national defense. In the field of security, The American Legion advocated and fought for the unification of the Armed Forces, the Civil Defense Act of 1950, military career incentive programs, the military pay raise, and many other measures which lend themselves to a sound national defense program.

Members of The American Legion can be proud of their national security program and can honestly say, "It's Great to be an American Legionnaire."

In FASHION now

The V-necked pullover that was once the domain of the college man has been taken over by the girls. Other news in the sweater department included the strong trend toward the longer torso-lined sweater. There are plenty of brief lengths around, too, in boleros and waist-length cardigans but the newest thing is the elongated sweater with the V-neck.

The variety of necklines in sweaters is something to please all. There are bateau necklines scooped out necklines for cocktail and evening wear, little ribbed collars, and contarsting ribbing trims. Some sweaters even have cuffs to match the collar and removable collars and cuffs.

The color of the sweater should be flattering to your face. It can, if chosen correctly, intensify the color of your eyes and bring out the color of your skin and hair. If in dark colors and colors that harmonize with your skirts. A monotone effect is best of all.

A good cardigan is a must and is a year - around sweater investment. In the fall it can be worn with a short-sleeved slipon and for spring and summer as a wrap for cool evenings.

Many sweaters are being made of the new miracle fibers, such as Vicara and Acrilan. Care is less of a problem with these new fibers. They wash easily and keep their shape. You will not need to worry about moths as with wool sweaters.

There is a wide choice in the glamor sweater line. The elaborately jeweled and befurred creations that evening sweaters have become are a great deal to perk up a tired wardrobe.

DUCKS AND GEESE ARRIVING IN VIRGINIA

C. F. Phelps, chief of the Game Division of the Commission of Game and Inland Fisheries, reports that ducks and geese already have begun to arrive on their winter feeding grounds in Virginia. Earlier reports from nesting grounds in the Canadian provinces and the northern United States indicate that we should expect an increased wintering population of ducks and geese this year, Phelps said. This is good news for the thousands of gunners who will be hunting migratory waterfowl in the Old Dominion this fall.

School children all over the country buy nearly 90 million United States Savings Stamps each year. This means 90 million impacts on the thrift message on youngsters.

The Government recently reported farm debt for the first six months of the year was 10 per cent higher than it was for the like period in 1954.
